

PART-TIME QUALITATIVE RESEARCH ASSISTANT

Dr. Madina Agénor, Assistant Professor in the Department of Behavioral and Social Sciences at Brown University School of Public Health, is seeking a part-time Qualitative Research Assistant to assist with a qualitative research study exploring the role of multilevel gendered racism in shaping access to PrEP among Black and Latina women who use drugs.

Job responsibilities include:

- Recruiting study participants in community-based and health care settings;
- Assisting with the development of data collection instruments, recruitment materials, and IRB application;
- Scheduling and conducting in-person interviews with Black and Latina women who use drugs in the Boston area;
- Reviewing and preparing interview transcripts for data analysis;
- Developing, testing, and refining a codebook of inductive and deductive codes;
- Applying the codebook to all interview transcripts using Dedoose;
- Preparing thematic matrices and memos for data analysis; and
- Assisting with manuscript preparation.

Required qualifications include:

- Prior qualitative research coursework and/or experience;
- Knowledge of sexual and reproductive health, substance use issues, and/or racial/ethnic health inequities;
- Familiarity with structural and social determinants of health, including racism and sexism;
- Comfortable working with socially and economically marginalized populations in the U.S.;
- Strong organizational skills and attention to detail;
- Able to work independently and be self-motivated;
- Able to work collaboratively and receive constructive feedback;
- Able to stay on schedule and meet deadlines; and
- Excellent oral and written communication skills.

Preferred qualifications include:

- Ability to speak and conduct interviews in Spanish

Position details:

- Part-time (~10 hours/week)
- Hybrid (with an in-person component in the Boston area)
- Start date: April 15, 2022
- End date: March 1, 2023 (with possibility of extension)

- $15-20/hour (based on academic level)
